The brainchild of Boston Musician and Author Jen Trynin and bookstore connoisseur Tim Huggins, Earfull first launched in the Fall of 2001 with the concept that, given a conducive environment, book people will appreciate being exposed to live music, and rock people will realize how cool it is to hear great authors reading their work aloud! EARFULL aimed to provide that environment, combining prominent author readings with established singer-songwriters in the hopes of broadening the appreciation of and audiences for both. After a brief hiatus from multiple sold-out seasons of the series, the Mosesian Center for the Arts brought the beloved programming back for a second season to a whole new audience.

Tickets go on-sale Friday, April 21st at 10am and are just $25 at MosesianArts.org. The series is known to sell out quickly so patrons are encouraged to purchase tickets early.

Earfull is made possible by The Rice Family Foundation, Q Division, Creamer Management, and Branch Line. For more information, visit Mosesianarts.org or call 617-923-0100.
